Royal Botanical Gardens,

Very dear Confrere — — Thank you very much for your report on my specimens dated 13th March. I am very glad to get your opinion on several of these. I have some of them for Bartholomews & recede but shall await your publication of them (I suppose) in Annales Mycologici.

I have a few more specimens ready but this terrible war takes our interest out of everything else. We are in daily expectation of Italy's assistance in bringing it to a just and humanitarian close Yours I Deamici

FOR BETTER SPELLING

Dropping useless silent letters woud enable riters and printers to do five per cent. more work in the time.

Fonetizing English spelling woud: (1) permit the twenty per cent. of the children's time now wasted on the spelling grind to be devoted to real education; and (2) make it much easier for foreners to lern English—the richest language in the world.

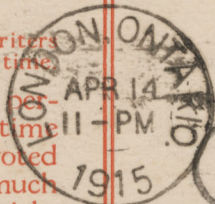

Tho, thruout, honor, siv, helth, enuf, septe, rime, meter, fotograf, &c., &c., &c.

Such improvements as in the words in italics hav the sanction of the most scolarly filologists and the greatest English-dictionary authors in the world.
